- 8. Will I get seasick?
While we cannot guarantee it, seasickness is rarely a problem due to the large size of today’s modern cruise ships. However, if you’re more sensitive to motion sickness on cruises, stay prepared with store-bought solutions. Some of the most popular products include skin patches and wristbands or Dramamine or Bonine tablets. Also let us know, and we will try to select a cabin that is more in the center of the ship to help reduce the chances of seasickness.
- 9. Are all my meals & drinks free on-board the ship?
Yes, most, if not all, your meals are FREE and included in your fare (with the exception of the 5-star specialty restaurants which have an additional surcharge). This includes everything from regional cuisine connected to the local culture, comfort food like the best pizza at sea and 24-hour free room service. Drinks are normally not free however, we have secured a Princess Premium Drink package to be included in your fare. It depends. Usually, you dress the same way you would do for a visit to a restaurant at home. Shoes are always required in dining venues, regardless of the time of day, and robes, shorts and bathing suits are not allowed in any of the restaurants. (Be sure to take a cover-up or a t-shirt and shorts with you if you're planning to spend your day near the pool). However, if there is a formal night, evening gown, cocktail dress or pantsuits for ladies, suit, combination or dinner jackets for men.

However, there are clearly marked "Designated Smoking Areas" available on-board and include a sufficient number of ashtrays that are emptied regularly.

No, marijuana of any type (including both medical and recreational) is not allowed on cruise ships, even if the ship sails from a state where the drug is legal.
